Omega Chapter-54
Our hearts are heavy as we reflect on the life of Bro. Dr. Moses C. Norman, Sr., the 33rd Grand Basileus. Dr. Norman joined Omega Chapter in July 2017. We are thankful to have been blessed to have had a true Omega Man, a legend, a giant, and a person that earned the highest praise while serving Omega for 62 years.

This edition also focuses on civil rights and hero, Brother Ernest G. Green. As a high schooler, a young Ernest Green helped to integrate Little Rock’s Central High School 60 years ago. He and eight other Black students were known as the “Little Rock Nine.” During my interview with Bro. Green, I learned of his undying passion for Omega as a founding member of Sigma Chapter at Michigan State University. After graduating from Michigan State, Green’s first job was at the A. Phillip Randolph Education Fund which included working with Brother Bayard Rustin.

Both Omega men were recognized by U.S. Presidents. The 44th U.S. President Barack Obama posthumously awarded Brother Rustin, the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 2013. President William J. Clinton presented Brother Green and the other “Little Rock Nine” members with the Congressional Gold Medal in 1999.

Other stories in this issue that presents civil rights interests to the Brotherhood includes the Grand Basileus Message, Omega’s First Inter-Racial Group, and a profile article on Brother Arthur L. Burnett entitled Top Judge.

Giving Honor to God and My Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

To the men of Omega, I pray that you and your families are in the best of God’s loving care. These perilous times require fervent prayer and the Fraternity’s Chaplains host a prayer call Monday through Friday at 6:30 a.m. to pray for us all and for mankind. The world is in dire straits and we need God’s covering now more than any other time in my life. As said by many long before me, “There are far too many of us dying!” Great focus continues to be placed on foreign conflicts and foreign affairs but let’s be very clear, “War is not the answer!” There is a conflict going on right here on American soil that is well underway that appears to be aimed directly against young African American men and children.

Smartphones continue to be the tool used to produce indisputable and critical visual evidence from eyewitnesses to senseless acts of violence and murder. The videos are disturbing but the convictions against those sworn to defend our wellbeing are nonexistent. The senseless death of Alton Sterling was alarming when it happened and it was heart wrenching to see the video and then hear that his death would not be considered a violation of his Civil Rights by Federal Law. The officers though criticized are at home with their families, unscathed. As difficult as it may seem, I pray that the families and citizens of Baton Rouge, Louisiana will maintain hope even though they failed to convict the two officers responsible for his death. Brother Anthony Scott and his family had a different outcome. Though it will not bring Walter Scott back, the Scott family and the citizens of Charleston, South Carolina were able to see justice served. Ms. Scott, the matriarch, is a strong woman of faith and extended forgiveness to the officer who confessed and pleaded guilty to committing the crime and violating Walter’s Civil Rights. The rendered verdict allowed the justice that she and her family were seeking.

The violence of these and countless other cases have helped to create division within our cities and nation over the treatment of Black Men by those sworn to serve and protect. Two days ago the violation of life against another African American child was unfathomable. Jordan Edwards was an outstanding young man who embraced excellence and took careful steps to honor and respect his family, teachers, friends and his peers; he did everything right. An outstanding student with a 3.5 GPA in a challenging Independent School, he was an outstanding athlete, a team player, the student that every teacher dreamed of teaching and the one who was so well liked for his humanity and humbleness by classmates, teachers and the community. I pray that his parents will maintain their faith and keep teaching because they have done an outstanding job with their children who were doing just what they should have been when Jordan’s life was taken. Today, the world knows his name. I hope the family and his brothers will be able to take peace in knowing that the Lord recognized his greatness and his sacrifice will be the answer to save other lives because this time there will be no escape from justice. Though the scales of justice are unbalanced, Jordan Edwards was great enough that there will be a difference in the outcome of this case. Not only will his family fight for right, but I hope his school, coaches and his community will lead the rest of this nation in saying that enough is enough! Please note that an offer of financial compensation might very well be an attempt by the City officials at reconciliation. This offer will fall far short of this family’s opportunity to continue to raise this fine young man toward certain success and it will never measure up to their phenomenal loss. I hope Balch Spring, Texas will insure that America remembers them for getting it right in trying and convicting this officer for taking the life of this most outstanding and promising young man, one of their very own that was destined for prime time! I pray that justice is the certain outcome.

I thank God for the body cameras because the initial report was inaccurate and declared that Jordan and his brothers were driving aggressively toward the police when they were driving away. Brothers, we must keep fighting the fight to get body cameras on every officer in every city as a critical priority. We must keep fighting for what is right and not let the many distractions turn us around because “We are One” and together we will be the bridge over these troubling times and we will continue building bridges toward a better way of life!

Fraternally,

Since its humble beginnings on the Howard University campus, the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity continues to be on the front line, leveraging its power, influence and more than 100 years of commitment to the uplift of our people and our communities.

Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc. was founded on November 17, 1911, at Howard University in Washington, D.C., and is the first international fraternal organization to be founded on the campus of a historically black college.
My Brothers in Omega,

Typically when I submit my article to the Oracle, I thank you for your support in the forward movement of our beloved Fraternity. I encourage each of you to continue on your paths of success, lift as you climb, and understand that you are vital to the positive proliferation of our brotherhood. I also remind you that the legacy of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity carries with it a heavy responsibility. It is imperative that we walk as leaders and communicate with a clear, consistent public identity. At this moment in history, we are faced with challenges like never before and our efforts are needed more than ever. Typically, that is what I would say.

However, the gravity of the hour requires that I spend a moment to reflect on my mentor, Brother Dr. Moses C. Norman, Sr., the longest serving Grand Basileus in our history. Grand Basileus Norman died on July 11, 2017. There were hundreds and hundreds of Omega Men at his memorial and funeral. More than 297,000 received the video of the memorial and more than 36,000 viewed the memorial on line.

During his lifetime, Brother Grand Norman interacted with the Founders. Amazingly, when he talked about them, he called them by their first names. Brother Grand Basileus Norman always brought good sense, sound judgment, levelheadedness, prudence, wisdom, and insight to any discussion or debate. The impact he’s had on our lives cannot be measured.

In 2005, I was appointed the 7th District Historian. I had the pleasure of interviewing Brother Grand Norman. I never forgot that day. Since that initial 1 ½ hour interview, I could talk to him freely about fraternal and non-fraternal matters. He always kept our discussions in confidence, whether I asked him to do so or not. He did not issue consequences to me, when on occasion, I would not heed his advice. Instead, he always stood ready to advise me again. He was a class act and the epitome of our four cardinal principles.

The writer, Allphonse de Lamartine, reminds us that sometimes, when one person is absent, the whole world seems depopulated. We thank you Bro. Norman. We love you. We miss you. We will never forget you.

May God continue to bless the Norman family and our great fraternity!

Fraternally,

David Marion, Ph.D.

Over the years, we have seen many African American men struggle with stress and mental health disorders, especially depression. Mental illness affects one out of every five Americans of all races every year.

Suicide is the third leading cause of death among African Americans 15 to 24 years old, and African American men are four times more likely to commit suicide than African American women. Mental illness can make African American men more vulnerable to substance abuse, homelessness, incarceration, and homicide.

Unfortunately, only 25 percent of African American men who suffer from psychological stress and mental illness get the help they need. Some men think that reaching out for help could be seen as a sign of weakness, but ignoring the problem isn't going to make it disappear.

We are here to tell you that taking action is a sign of strength and resourcefulness and that it is possible to deal with mental illness and become stronger than ever with the right kind of treatment and support.

A New Partnership Brings Hope
As Omega brothers, we need to understand mental illness, and we need to be equipped with the right tools to deal with it. That's why Omega has partnered with the National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (NIMHD), part of the National Institutes of Health, on an initiative called Brother, You're on My Mind. “Brother, You're on My Mind” is raising awareness of the mental health challenges associated with depression and stress that affect African American men and their families. The initiative has two major goals:

Goal 1: To collaborate on efforts to educate Omega members, their families, and related communities on the effects of depression and stress.

Goal 2: To communicate the importance of seeking help for mental health problems and to encourage affected individuals to get information, possibly by talking with their healthcare providers to obtain appropriate treatment.

A Call to Action
We're asking all chapters of Omega Psi Phi, Fraternity, Inc. to plan community outreach events to help our brothers, our families and our communities learn about mental health problems and stress in African American men.

To support event planning and evaluation, we worked with NIMHD to develop a toolkit of materials that Omega chapters can share with members, their families, and their communities. The toolkit is available on an NIMHD webpage dedicated to the Brother You're on My Mind program at https://www.nimhd.nih.gov/programs/edu-training/byomm/toolkit.html

The toolkit includes the following materials:
• Depression fact sheets
• Community outreach checklist
• Partnership development tips
• Event planning checklist
• PowerPoint slide presentation on mental health
• Event group activities
• Social media guidelines and sample social media messages to post on Facebook and Twitter
• Event evaluation forms

In keeping with our fraternity’s cardinal principles of manhood, scholarship, perseverance, and uplift, we must help each other deal with the very real problems of mental illness and psychological stress. We need to:
• Understand that depression and other mental illnesses are not signs of weakness. They are diseases that affect many people. Effective treatments are available to help us overcome the challenges of mental illness and be the best men we can be.

• Educate ourselves about stress and mental illness and help others learn from reliable sources of information.
• Equip ourselves with the tools to help our brothers who are at risk of developing mental illness or dealing with this condition.
• Persevere to overcome challenges like being reluctant to ask for help, seeking out help, and sticking with treatment over time.
• Lift-up our brothers by reducing the terrible consequences of mental illnesses, especially depression, and spreading the hopeful news that, with help and support, these conditions can be controlled and life can be better.

With the help of NIMHD, Omega will be evaluating the initiative to see how well it is working. For the evaluation, Omega is planning to collect data from the chapters, starting in the next few months. We’re encouraging all Omega chapters to help with the data collection by being part of the national count of future Brother, You’re on My Mind efforts. Some chapters have already begun planning events, and we are beginning to hear about the impact these activities are having on our members.

This is the time for all chapters to incorporate Brother, You’re on My Mind outreach events into their spring and summer planning. Download the toolkit materials and reach out to your District Representative for questions and/or guidance on planning local events.

Together, we can help put an end to the devastating effects of untreated mental health disorders and unmanaged stress among African American men. By building awareness and starting dialogues, we can encourage men to reach out for help to improve their own lives and the lives of those around them.

Heart disease is the number one killer of all Americans. The prevalence of high blood pressure in the African-American community is greater than any other group in the world. African-Americans have a higher death rate from heart attacks, strokes, heart failure, and kidney failure than the majority white population here in United States.

Forty-eight percent of African-American women and 44% of African-American men have some level of cardiovascular disease including heart disease and a history of stroke. African-Americans are more likely to develop elevated blood pressure and to develop it earlier in life. 2 out of 5 African-Americans have high blood pressure and less than half of them have it under control according to statistics.

African-Americans have a higher risk of developing heart failure which can lead to increased rates of hospitalizations, earlier physical disability, and premature death. African-Americans have their first heart attack and/or first stroke at an earlier age than any other group in United States. African-Americans have a higher rate of developing heart failure before the age of 50 than do whites.

Also, African-Americans have a higher incidence of hypertension, hyperlipidemia, type 2 diabetes, sedentary lifestyle, and obesity. Other risk factors that play a role in the higher incidence of cardiovascular disease in African-Americans are inadequate health literacy, and smoking. These statistics demonstrate the significant cardiovascular risk that African-Americans carry. This means that we have to take a preventive approach to our cardiovascular health. Most of us utilize our doctors for illness purposes. This means that we usually go to the doctor when we are feeling sick, however how many of us utilize our doctors for prevention.

Another point is that Black patients must have a relationship established with a primary care physician. When speaking of cardiovascular health, if one waits until symptoms occur in most cases the disease is already advanced. Unfortunately hypertension is referred to as “the silent killer.” This means that most with hypertension have no symptoms at all. It has been shown that aspirin has a beneficial effect in preventing heart disease. Patients should also be aware what their blood pressure is and if medication is needed. Smoking is a major risk factor for heart disease, so it important to quit. Other improvement strategies include healthy diet choices and increasing physical activity is crucial.

Article by Bro. Dr. Jedan Phillips

Brother Jedan Phillips, MD., is a Family Practitioner at Stony Brook University Medical Center and a Clinical Associate Professor, Stony Brook University Medical School.
Breast Cancer is usually synonymous with women and pink ribbons. Part of this is due to the well-funded Susan G. Komen for the Cure campaign that has spent nearly $1.5 billion for breast cancer education, research, and advocacy since its inception. Although much attention is focused on women’s issues with breast cancer, little attention is given to its pernicious effects on men. Unbeknownst to many, there are risk factors that make men more susceptible to developing breast disease than women. In order to avoid the ills of breast cancer, men also need to be equipped with the information necessary to make informed decisions about their treatment and options.

Breast cancer awareness starts with knowing risk factors for this disease. Risk factors for breast cancer in men include advanced age, inherited breast cancer gene mutation (BRACA 2), obesity, gynecomastia, family history, Kliefelter’s syndrome (a rare genetic disorder), excessive alcohol intake, liver disease, high levels of estrogen and prior radiation exposure. While this list may seem exhaustive, it is necessary for unsuspecting males to know what may increase their risk.

The signs and symptoms for breast cancer in men are similar to those reported in women. They include feeling a breast lump or mass, pain, tenderness, and nipple discharge. If symptoms are noted, a primary care physician should be consulted.

Another study also reported poorer outcomes among black men, including advanced-stage disease at presentation, larger tumor sizes, more lymph node involvement, and higher tumor grade (J Clin Oncol 2015 Jul 20;33(21) 2337-44).

Brother Stafford Brown, Jr., M.D. is a Radiologist specializing Breast Imaging. Dr. Brown is an Associate Professor at Eastern Virginia Medical School, and works in private practice in the Hampton Roads, VA area. The Life Member was initiated at Lambda Zeta (University of Virginia) in 1990. He currently a member of Alpha Iota Graduate Chapter in Suffolk, VA.

The American Cancer Society estimates in 2017 there will be approximately 2,470 new cases of male breast cancer diagnosed in the United States and about 460 men will die this year. It is a well-known fact that African-American males in the United States experience socioeconomic and racial disparities. Likewise, Black men are disproportionately affected in regards to male breast cancer. In a recent article published in the Journal of Clinical Oncology, Black men were reported to have higher incidence rates and were more likely to be diagnosed with breast cancer at a younger age than their white counterparts (J Clin Oncol 2015 Jul 20;33(21) 2337-44).

The most common reason for men being seen by a physician with a breast symptom is gynecomastia. Gynecomastia refers to enlargement of breast tissue in men. This disease usually presents as a unilateral mass, tenderness or pain. Most commonly it occurs spontaneously and will resolve without treatment.

The 33rd Grand Basileus Joins Omega Chapter

Brother Dr. Moses C. Norman, Sr.

It is with profound sadness that Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc. regrets to inform the Brotherhood that our 33rd Grand Basileus, Moses Conrad Norman Sr., has transitioned from labor unto eternal rest.

Omega’s beloved past Grand Basileus entered Omega Chapter on July 11, 2017. Brother Norman was born on January 3, 1935 in Gray, Georgia.

Brother Norman was initiated into the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity on December 13, 1954 through the Beta Psi Chapter at Clark College in Atlanta, Georgia.

Brother Norman’s three sons are also Omega men, Brothers Moses Conrad, Jr.; Christopher Kent; and Jeffrey Brenton.

Brother Grand Norman was a lifelong educator. In 1978, Brother Grand Norman earned a Ph.D. in Educational Leadership and Management from Georgia State University in Atlanta.

Prior to his death, Brother Grand Norman had served as associate professor and Interim Dean of the School of Education at Clark Atlanta University.

In 1984, Brother Grand Norman was elected the Fraternity’s 33rd Grand Basileus during the Grand Conclave held in Louisville, Ky. He was elected to three consecutive terms, the longest tenure of any Grand Basilei. Brother Grand Norman concluded his tenure in Detroit in 1990.
Brother Grand Norman has held many offices within the fraternity, including Vice Basileus and Basileus of Eta Omega Chapter; Director of Public Relations for the Seventh District; First Vice District Representative and then District Representative of the Seventh District.

On the international level, Brother Grand Norman was elected Grand Keeper of Records and Seal and later First Vice Grand Basileus. He also served as chair of the Council of Former Grand Basilei.

As news spread of his passing, accolades abounded from Omega’s leaders.

Lloyd J. Jordan, the Fraternity’s 36th Grand Basileus, said, “I do not know whom our Founders were thinking of when they thought of our Cardinal Principles, but after knowing Moses Norman, I must think the Founders were thinking of him.”

George H. Grace, 37th Grand Basileus, said, “Grand Basileus Moses Norman was never at a loss for words, and he brought dignity to any situation.”

Warren G. Lee Jr., who followed George Grace as Grand Basileus, said, “Bro Norman was a great friend and mentor particularly as he encouraged me and others in both our professional and fraternal development. He will certainly be missed but never forgotten.”

First Vice Grand Basileus David Marion, who like Brother Grand Norman served as the Seventh District Representative, said, “among others. “He was like a father to me.

He was someone whose advice I sought and heeded. He will be missed.”

On a personal level, Brother Grand Norman was heavily involved in the civic arena, having served as president of the West Fulton Rotary Club of Atlanta; as a founding member of the Atlanta Partnership of Business and Education; the Education Task Force of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; and Vice President of the National Assault on Illiteracy; the YMCA; NAACP; and the Boy Scouts, among others.

For more than 30 years, he was an NCAA college football official in the SIAC and the MEAC, having worked more than 20 NCAA Championship playoff games, including the Division II National Championship game in 1993.

Brother Grand Norman served as chair of deacons at Christian Fellowship Baptist Church in College Park, Georgia, where he was a Sunday Morning Bible Study teacher and served as a member of the Sanctuary Choir, as church parliamentarian and as Director and Instructor of Wednesday Night Bible Study.

Brother Grand Norman is survived by his wife Gertrude, three sons – Brothers Moses Conrad, Jr.; Christopher Kent; and Jeffrey Brenton- and is grandfather of Conrad, III; Jeffrey Brenton, II; and Chloe Genevieve.
The skeletons of segregationists rose with glorious zeal when nine of America’s dark-hued students known as Negroes sought entrance to an Arkansas schoolhouse in the late-1950s.

The harsh attitude toward them “colored kids” considered neither their innocence nor the fact that they merely wanted a better education. The hatred—spawned by the decades of Jim Crow, was a stark reflection of the disenfranchisement of millions of Blacks and set the stage for an explosive and revolutionary confrontation that would shake the foundation of American legal and educational institutions.

On May 17, 1954, the Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas Supreme Court decision overturned the 1896 Plessy v. Ferguson “separate but equal” policy of legalized segregation. In short, the landmark decision by the highest court in the land declared segregation in public education unconstitutional.

The decision also consolidated five segregation cases from throughout the country. America, and the Land of Opportunity, one of the nicknames for the southern State of Arkansas, which once boasted a slave population of more than 110,000 and where one in five white citizens once were slave owners, had to abide by the ruling.

However, Little Rock’s city fathers attempted to take a moderate approach to the decision, but were pushed by Daisy Bates and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). The board of education asked if any Negro students were interested in transferring from an all-black school with limited resources to the all-white Central High, and if they would sign a petition. Nine students signed up.

In 1957, Ernest Gideon Green and eight other black teens would forever come to be known as the “Little Rock Nine” for their courage in helping to tear down the walls of segregation in U.S. schools.

Generations of children—especially Black students trapped in the snare of educational inequity—would follow the trail blazed by those nine beacons and be uplifted by the physical and emotional risks they took to illuminate pathways of opportunity.

Green, whose attractive smile and small frame were forced into history’s arms. Ernest would become a pioneer of one of America’s major civil rights confrontations. After a yearlong midnight—a year of fear (1957-1958), he would rise as the first black graduate of Central High School. (Continues on next page)

LITTLE ROCK NINE
PIONEER

BROTHER ERNEST G. GREEN,
Story by Brother Milbert O. Brown, Jr., Editor of The Oracle
“We wanted to widen options for ourselves, and later for our children,” Bro. Ernest G. Green

PHOTOS: The “Little Nine” students escorted by the U.S. Army. Ernest Green, the first Black graduate of Central High School.

And when the school bell rings this fall, it will mark the 60th anniversary of the historic moment in U.S. history when “separate but equal” education was banned.

In a recent interview, the soft-spoken, Green, now 75, reflected on his experience as one of the “Little Rock Nine” and the challenges of growing up in Little Rock, the capital city of Arkansas on the Arkansas River.

Against the picturesque backdrop of a street lined with apple blossoms, Green said the ugliness of the city remains just beneath the surface. “If you scratched Little Rock deep enough—racism comes out.”

Decades later, in 1999, Arkansas native President Bill Clinton presented Green and the other “Little Rock Nine” members with the Congressional Gold Medal.
Green hails from the central district and skipped a grade in school. “If you came to the first grade, and you could read, they bounced you on to the next grade,” Green said.

His mother was a schoolteacher, and his father a janitor at the post office. Green was the oldest of three children, but had to become a man faster that he would have wanted when at 13, his father died. Because of his mother’s limited teaching income, Green took a job during the summer to help support the family. “I worked at a Jewish country club because, in Little Rock, the other country clubs wouldn’t accept anybody that wasn’t a white Christian,” he said. “I handed out towels, mopped the floor, and kept the place reasonably clean.”

A socially conscious student, Green said he was aware of the racial storm brewing across the nation.

“I remember the picture vividly in ‘Jet Magazine’ of Emmett Till laying in a coffin; Jackie Robinson breaking into baseball, and the Montgomery Bus Boycott were all indications of what was going on and how black people were at the forefront of some of those changes,” commented Green.

A year before attending Central High School, Green became an Eagle Scout. His neighbor, Louis Brunson, served as scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop #73 at Mount Zion Baptist Church. Green said his scout training provided him with the endurance—and awareness—to tackle his daily school confrontations. “Being an Eagle Scout helped me to navigate and realize the importance of what we were doing once we finally got into Central,” said Green, who was an incoming member of Central’s senior class. “It also gave me some perspective of how we [the Little Rock Nine students] were viewed and our importance in terms of history.”

The harsh climate of Little Rock in the fall of 1957 served as a catalyst in the Supreme Court’s Brown v. Board of Education desegregation order. That tension was palpable at Central during Green’s senior year, which he said was very intimidating. “We would walk through the crowd as the troops guarded us,” he said. “People would be hollering using every use of the N-word they could figure out. The Arkansas governor [Orval Faubus] put in the National Guard to keep us out, then they used the local police who couldn’t keep the mob in order. Finally, Eisenhower sent the troops in.”

After two weeks of being unable to attend classes at Central High, President Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered the U.S. Army’s 101st Airborne Division to escort the “Little Rock Nine,” into the school. The 34th president was the former supreme commander of the Allied Forces in Europe during World War II and a five-star Army general.

However, during the Little Rock crisis, Gov. Faubus ignored the Supreme Court’s ruling—and Eisenhower’s orders. Eisenhower was a conservative and a reluctant supporter of civil rights, but became the first president since Reconstruction to use federal troops in support of civil rights. He also later signed the Civil Rights Act of 1957.

At Central High, the “Little Rock Nine” faced challenges that would test their resolve.

It was inside the school when we were really harassed,” Green said. “They would throw steamed wet towels our way, and at night we would get threatening phone calls. One of the conditions that was imposed on us was that we couldn’t do any extracurricular activities which meant no sports or club memberships.”

Bates, president of the Arkansas NAACP, and her husband owned the black weekly newspaper, the Arkansas State Press. “Daisy was a tough lady, and she was willing to use the pen, as well as her connections around the state,” Green said. “She was very helpful in getting us through that year.”

She also was a general in the struggle and the NAACP her army. Its foot soldiers included attorneys Thurgood Marshall and Wiley Branton. Marshall would become a Supreme Court judge, and Branton, an Omega man, served as lead attorney for the “Little Rock Nine.” He later became dean of Howard University’s Law School.

Other Omegas who were part of the NAACP legal army included Brothers Oliver W. Hill and James Nabrit. Brother Hill, was one of the lead lawyers in the Davis v. County School Board of Price Edward County. The suit challenged a Virginia state law of segregated schools for 117 black students.

In 2005, the NAACP awarded Hill its highest honor, the Spingarn Medal. Brother Hill was also selected by Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc., as the recipient of the “1957 National Omega Man of the Year Award.”

Brother Nabrit also was the attorney who argued the Bolling v. Sharpe Supreme Court case, which presented the problems of segregation within the District of Columbia’s public schools. Omega’s Nabrit would later become the president of Howard University. Both Brothers Hill’s and Nabrit’s cases were part of the five suits that were combined into the 1954 Supreme Court case Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas.

In 1958, Green became the first black student to receive a diploma from Central High School.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. wanted to witness Green’s graduation that night as he sat with the Green family. “As the family set the table with fried chicken, corn on the cob, lemonade and sweet potato pie, Martin Luther King Jr., expressed how proud he was that I had completed the year,” Green said. “Dr. King and I didn’t talk too long because I was trying to get out with my buddies and celebrate.”
A CIVIL RIGHTS PROFILE

Brother Ernest Green (left) worked with Brother Bayard Rustin at the A. Phillip Randolph Education Fund in the 1960s.

After graduating, Green was awarded a scholarship to Michigan State University from an anonymous donor. Years later, he discovered the donor was John A. Hannah, president of the university. Hannah was the first chairman of the Civil Rights Commission under the Eisenhower administration.

“I guess he thought that this was something he could do and I’m grateful that he did,” Green said. “Funny thing, in my role as student leader, I picketed Hannah’s home many times during the height of the early 1960s Civil Rights movement,” Green said, with a laugh.

Green’s activism at Michigan State increased as he served as the NAACP campus president and a member of the student government. “We were in support of the students in the South, the lunch counter sit-ins and voter registration. The City of East Lansing [Michigan] had a restriction on selling homes to black folks, so we picketed in East Lansing as well,” Green said.

He added to his leadership portfolio when he decided to join Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. A mathematics graduate student named Brother Square Partee helped them organize the Omega chapter on campus, Green said.

Ernest, with five other line brothers, became the founding members of Omega Psi Phi’s Sigma Chapter at Michigan State in 1961.

Another famous Omega man on that founding Sigma Chapter line was Brother Herbert Adderley. Brother Adderley was an All-American halfback, and the only player to appear in four of the first Super Bowls with the NFL’s Green Bay Packers and the Dallas Cowboys. The Philadelphia native switched to the cornerback position during his pro career and was known as part the “Doomsday Defense.” He was inducted into the NFL’s Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1980.

“I saw Omega has a way to expose to the university that there were solid African American males that could make a contribution,” Green said. “I became an official lamp in 1960—and we pledged about a year.” Green noted, “I saw the Fraternity as an important part of my upbringing. I loved the connection, contacts, and the history of what the Fraternity stood for.”

After graduation from Michigan State University with a bachelor’s in social science and a master’s in sociology, Green began his professional career. His first job was working for the A. Phillip Randolph Education Fund in New York City. His boss was Bayard Rustin, key organizer of the 1963 March on Washington, and an Omega man initiated at Wilberforce University’s Upsilon Chapter.

Green said Brother Rustin “was a great person to work with. We were preparing young brothers for the building trades as electricians, plumbers, and steamfitters. My job was to help place applicants in an apprenticeship program and get their union cards.”

After his job with Brother Rustin, Green was appointed assistant secretary of labor by President Jimmy Carter. Later, Green became a managing director at Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc.

“It was my relationships that I established with job training programs that allowed me to have a client base on the municipal and public finance side,” Green said.

In many ways, Green’s life has come full circle, from hurling educational barriers in Little Rock to attending meetings at the White House.

Green was pressed into becoming a pioneer at an early age.

But, “we [Little Rock Nine students] recognized the importance of being at Central, and the manner in which folks tried to keep us out underscored how important this was for us as black students,” he said. “They worked so hard to keep us away [that] it confirmed to me that we were doing the right thing.”

On the grounds of the State Capitol in Little Rock, a plaque inscription mirrors Green’s sentiments about his experiences. “We wanted to widen options for ourselves, and later for our children.”
A few years after World War II, several veterans hurriedly rushed to America’s post-secondary institutions for an education after serving their country. One of the schools that attracted soldiers and sailors was an all-male school called Rutgers University.

The school was distinguished as the “birthplace of college football,” when the team played in the first intercollegiate football game against Princeton in 1869. After the 1919 graduation of athlete, singer and civil rights activist Paul Robeson more Black Americans considered attending the New Jersey campus.

Fraternal life had always been a part of the institution’s history. Near the end of the 19th century, all fraternities were removed because of hazing. Later, the school reestablished fraternal ties, and in the late 1940s, there were 21 fraternities none of which were African American.

According to the September 1949 Oracle Magazine, “nine Rutgers men represented a milestone in Omega history by their initiation through Upsilon Phi Chapter. Six African Americans [Negroes] and three white students banded together to bring to Rutgers something which had been lacking … for more than 100 years of fraternity life—the practice of brotherhood.”

On June 4, 1949, the group of nine, broke through fraternal barriers when they became the first Inter-Racial Group in Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. The new Omega men included: William McCullough, an engineering student; Joseph Seward, the sports editor of The Targum; Arthur Seward, Joseph’s brother, was a star performer on the school’s cross-country and track teams. Another outstanding athlete was William “Bucky” Hatchett, a three-sport performer and the first Negro elected as president of the senior class. The three white brothers that helped to integrate the group were Brothers Antonio Doganiero, Vincent Appruzzese, and Norman Ledgin. Two prominent members of the group were Robert N. Boyd and Harvey Grimsley. Boyd was to attend dentistry school in the fall, and Grimsley was a starting halfback on the football team.

NEW INTER-RACIAL GROUP

Fraternity Life at Rutgers

EDITOR’S NOTE—Brother Norman Ledgin, one of Omega Psi Phi’s new white brothers, recently initiated at Rutgers University in New Jersey is guest editorial writer for this issue of the ORACLE. He writes on “Fraternity Life at Rutgers.” Brother Ledgin is editor of the “TARGUM,” the student newspaper at Rutgers.

With the expulsion of its Amherst chapter by Phi Kappa Psi fraternity last fall over the matter of initiating a Negro, Rutgers was awakened to the fact that certain democratic principles were being violated on the social level of the campus. Few had raised the cry of “discrimination” before national magazines took up the sword against the racial practices of Greek-letter societies.

The Rutgers Student Council moved to clean its own house, while the Interfraternity Council warned, “Hands off!” Above the protests of undergraduate and alumni fraters, the Student Council asked the Rutgers Board of Trustees to bar all new fraternities whose charts were restrictive on the basis of race and religion. Furthermore, those fraternities already operating under such charts were to be placed on immediate probation for a certain number of years, at the end of which time they were to have cleaned out the restrictions or face ouster from the campus.

It has been almost a year since the trustees received the recommendations, and no word has been released by them pertaining to the suggested rules.

Action was taken unexpectedly, however, by a group of men who had hitherto been silent on the issue—the $3 Negro students at Rutgers. They served notice that they intended to bring two fraternities to the campus, Omega Psi Phi and Alpha Phi Alpha, and set them up on an inter-racial basis. Also, Rutgers’ only inter-faith fraternity, an unaffiliated group known as the Georgian Society, went inter-racial with the initiation of a popular Negro student.

These steps were taken amid the din of controversy among the 21 fraternities at Rutgers and between profound anti-fraternity groups, and they served to illustrate that the principle of fraternity could be perpetuated in a manner free of discriminatory practices. As it was stated editorially in the student newspaper, The Targum, “For these men (the Negro students), the world ‘fraternity’ runs the gamut of races and religions—from Alpha to Omega.”

NEW INTER-RACIAL GROUP

The 1949 Oracle mentioned that Brothers Boyd and Grimsley were responsible for bringing Omega to Rutgers. They served as liaisons between Rutgers and Upsilon Phi Graduate Chapter until they could establish an undergraduate chapter on campus.

Omega’s Brother Norman Ledgin, the editor of the student newspaper, The Targum was instrumental in forcing the university to accept African American fraternities. Because there were less than 35 African American men on campus at the time, the administration wanted to combine Omega Psi Phi and Alpha Phi Alpha new members into one single African American fraternity. At the time, both new fraternities had accepted white members.

Brother Ledgin wrote an editorial that was published in the 1949 Oracle entitled, “Fraternity Life at Rutgers,” which mentioned the discriminatory practices on campus.

“The Dean of Men didn’t like our decision to start the new Omega inter-racial chapter. “We demonstrated that brotherhood is colorblind. What we were doing was revolutionary, and we knew it,” commented Bro. Ledgin.

He also added that “we were not anti-fraternity, but we were against bigotry, discrimination, and racism. What we did was more like social action. There was a terrible reaction by white fraternities and the Rutgers administration. They simply hated what we did, but in a very short time, fraternities at Rutgers began to integrate. It was more than an experiment, and we knew that we would succeed.”

Norman Ledgin grew up in a Russian Jewish culture, much different from his best friend and pledge brother, Joseph Steward. Similar to Steward, Ledgin was also a victim of American Jim Crow traditions. One day he was called into the Ed Curtin’s office, the Dean of Men after circulating a petition against nuclear weapons. Curtin replied ‘that’s the trouble with you Jews, you all want something for nothing.’

“They kept a file on all of us. The white fraternity pledge masters would come to the Dean of Men’s office to go through the files to pick potential candidates. The files of Black students were rejected. Only a few fraternities were interested in prospects with a Jewish heritage. So, the Dean of Men’s office was complicit in continuing fraternal segregation,” Brother Ledgin said.

Ledgin, now 89, is the only known remaining brother from Omega’s historical inter-racial group. He recently met with Omega men from Kansas City’s Graduate Chapter, Omicron Xi. As Ledgin recalls, “there was no period of pledge activity. We decided to go up to Newark, and the chapter, Upsilon Psi initiated us into Omega Psi Phi. We didn’t have a separate chapter for years. We didn’t have activities, nor did we attend national meetings—we were just a club.

The Oracle’s 1949 issue also noted that the group had set a goal of gathering new members, but there was limited interest. The university required that the group had to have 20 members before a chapter could officially operate on campus. At Rutgers, there were only 24 African American men eligible for membership not including Black men who had joined Alpha Phi Alpha. After the 1949 inductees, no other white students expressed an interest in joining Omega.

On April 24, 1974, several years after the initial interracial group, Omega’s undergraduate chapter, Tau Zeta, was established as the official Omega chapter at Rutgers University.
Omega Psi Phi's Brother Arthur L. Burnett, Sr., has been at the head of his class throughout his life. Bro. Burnett graduated from Howard University (Summa Cum Laude) with a major in Political Science. In his junior year, he was selected as a Phi Beta Kappa honoree. When he completed his studies at New York University’s School of Law he graduated again at the top of his class.

The Honorable Arthur L. Burnett, Sr., (Retired) Judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, was selected as Top Judge of the Year for 2017 by the International Association of Top Professionals (IAOTP).

While inclusion with the IAOTP is an honor in itself, only a few members in each discipline are chosen for this distinction. These special honorees are distinguished based on their professional accomplishments, academic achievements, and leadership abilities. All honorees are invited to attend the IAOTP’s annual award gala at the end of this year for a night to honor their achievements.

Judge Burnett is currently the National Executive Director and National Spokesman for the National African American Drug Policy Coalition Inc. He flew to the top of his legal profession on June 26, 1969, when he was appointed as the first African American United States Magistrate. The position subsequently was renamed by Congress as “United States Magistrate Judge” in the United States, in which capacity he served until December 1975. He then became the Legal Advisor for the United States Civil Service System and served as a principal legal advisor to the President of the United States. In that position, Burnett oversaw all civil service and personnel law issues in dealing with all bills pending before the U.S. Congress.

In January 1980 he was again appointed United States Magistrate (now called United States Magistrate Judges) in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, where he served until appointed by President Ronald Reagan to the Superior Court of the District of Columbia in November 1987. He retired in October 1998 from active Associate Judge status and became a Senior Judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia and continued to serve actively hearing cases until August 1, 2004. During this period, Brother Burnett also served as Judge-in-Residence to the Children’s Defense Fund and as Co-Chair of its Judges’ program in the Children’s Defense Fund.

Throughout his illustrious career, Burnett has received numerous awards and has been recognized worldwide for his outstanding leadership and commitment to the profession. In 1963 while he worked as an adviser directly to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, he received the Sustained Superior Performance Award for his work in keeping the Attorney General advised of developments in major government corruption cases and in monitoring the Civil Rights Movement.

In December 1978, he was awarded the Distinguished Civil Service Award for his work in advising the President of the United States, and the U.S. Civil Service Commission. His work helped to secure the passage of the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978. He also has been recognized by the American Bar Association’s National Conference of Special Court Judges as the “Most Outstanding Special Court Judge in America.”

Brother Burnett has been the recipient of several awards for civil rights. He was presented the “ABA Commission on Racial and Ethnic Diversity in the Profession Spirit of Excellence Award” for his civil rights history by the American Bar Association. Burnett was also acknowledged as a WAYMAKER in the American Bar Association Judges’ Journal for his civil rights and judicial performance.

Now retired, Judge Burnett continues to serve as a citizen volunteer advisor to several offices in The White House and he was recently appointed by the Mayor of the District of Columbia as a member of the District of Columbia Commission on Fathers, Men and Boys. He is a member of Alpha Omega Graduate Chapter.
The Divine Nine made history in Raleigh, NC during the 2nd Annual Divine Nine Legislative Day held on May 17, 2017 at the Raleigh Convention Center.

Brother Antonio F. Knox, Sr., the 40th Grand Basileus said “we experienced the best in international leadership, collegiality and unity among 848 members in record attendance to discuss the critical issues that affect North Carolina and the nation that included voter registration and suppression tactics, body cameras for police officers in every city, getting the legal age limit changed from 16 to 18 for teenagers not to be tried as adults and so much more.”

Brother Knox also added, “It was a very historic and heartfelt day of kindred but progressive action, thought and tireless commitment as International Presidents, Regional leadership, Presidents and Administration from HBCU’s, smashing speakers, elected officials from the North Carolina House and Senate and across the state and attendees lifted our voices, plan of action and unyielding commitment forward.”

On May 16th, North Carolina Governor Roy Cooper graciously welcomed the Divine Nine leadership as they engaged in a dialogue of the issues. National leadership included: Jonathan A. Mason, Sr., International President of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Incorporated; Thomas L. Battles, Jr., Grand Polemarch of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, Incorporated; Dr. Everett B. Dr. Staccato Powell, the Grand Chaplain of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity was the keynote speaker.

Andrea Harris, member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Incorporated, delivered a dynamic address on the State of NC HBCUs. Cassandra Deck Brown, Raleigh Chief of Police and a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Incorporated stopped by to render greetings.

Brother Knox commented that “the Garner Road Community Center was blessed as the community partner with financial support from each organization as we visited and toured the facility with Mozetta Johnson, CEO and member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Incorporated stopped by to render greetings.

The delegation also discussed the roles, responsibilities, and requirements of Omega’s chapter advisors. The Brothers noted that there must be a better understanding of what Omega chapter advisors are doing to positively serve as liaisons between the university and the Fraternity.

Chapter Started 37 Years Ago

ORANGE COUNTY, CA-Mu Alpha Alpha Chapter was chartered on March 15, 1980 and is the only Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc. graduate chapter in Orange County, California.

The 12th District Representative in Fall 1979 was Brother Arnold Butler. He assigned then Southern California Area Representative, Brother Ernie Bridges, to work with a group of graduate Brothers from U.S. Marine Corps Air Station-El Toro (MCAS El Toro).

The group organized and completed the steps necessary to charter a new chapter. Brother Bridges later transferred his financial membership to Mu Alpha Alpha and has been a beloved Brother and leader in the chapter since.

On March 18, 2017 Brother Tony Moore organized a Mu Alpha Alpha Chapter special recognition and social event featuring Brother Bridges’ service to Omega and Mu Alpha Alpha over the years.
George Gilbert was a tall slim kid that grew up in the projects of a nurturing Black Pittsburgh community. In the blue-collar town, Gilbert excelled at Carrick High School. Armed with a good jump shot, a 6’4” skinny frame, and an All-City honor, Gilbert selected Duquesne University.

At the time Gilbert was on the basketball team with only two other Black males. All three men, George Gilbert, Wilbur Hines, and Jarrett Durham decided to pledge Que. “We were big men on campus and well-known because we were basketball players. The Alphas and Kappas wanted us to be part of their fraternity, but we had an interest in Omega Psi Phi because we viewed them as the men we wanted to become,” said Brother Gilbert. He also added, “during our pledgeships, we had to keep our interest in the Fraternity a secret from the coaching staff.

landscape, and was an excellent academic environment for the three future basketball Hall of Famers. Gilbert majored in Education with Hines and Durham majoring in Business. Wilbur Hines, a native of Princeton, NJ was at first a walk-on before receiving a basketball scholarship at Duquesne. Jarrett Durham was recruited from Aliquippa, PA.

The three Omegas’ best basketball season was in 1969. Because of their outstanding play during their university years, they were enshrined in Duquesne University’s Basketball Hall of Fame on January 13, 2017.

The team finished with a 21-5 win-lost record, and was ranked ninth in the nation by the Associated Press poll. The team was also part of the Elite Eight, but lost to the University of North Carolina and player Charlie Scott. North Carolina advanced to the Final Four, but lost to Coach John Wooden’s UCLA team, which featured player Lew Alcindor.

Brothers Gilbert, Hines and Durham were all initiated through Omicron Psi Chapter, a city-wide chapter based at the University of Pittsburgh. Brother Gilbert is a current member of Eta Omega Graduate Chapter, and provided information for this report.
An Omega Advances Tennis

O mega Psi Phi Fraternity's Dr. Robert W. “Whirlwind” Johnson was the force behind integrated tennis. The former football All-American built a tennis dynasty in Lynchburg, Va. that produced the first two African-American Grand Slam champions, Althea Gibson and Arthur Ashe.

Bro. Johnson, a human dynamo, did not hesitate once Althea’s course was set. He immediately spun into action and established the Junior Development Tennis Program under the aegis of the American Tennis Association. Each summer, he invited dozens of talented juniors to train on his backyard court.

They traveled the country, winning titles and making history. In 1953 (Ashe’s first year at camp), the USLTA extended an invitation to Dr. Johnson’s team to play the Nationals at Kalamazoo, M.I., using ATA credentials.

That same summer, Bobby Riggs conducted a clinic on Dr. Johnson’s court. Five Grand Slam champions, Riggs, Gibson, Ashe, Pauline Betz-Addie, and Manuel Santana, would succumb to the charisma of this man and grace his Lynchburg court with their presence. He embraced diversity as an integral part of America’s future; his camp was open to all races. It was the precursor to today’s tennis academy, with one exception: Dr. Johnson ran it with his own money.

Players traveled first class. In the spring of 1951, he integrated his first junior event; the USLTA Inter-scholastic Championships. Dr. Johnson, a soft-spoken man of unflinching determination, carried a “big racquet” and quietly “aced” the tennis world. He had the uncanny knack of influencing people and organizations to buy into his vision of a new tennis world.

This unlikely pioneer was so influential in the game that he could get black players into the main draw of the US Nationals at Forest Hills. This period of unprecedented opportunity for blacks on both the junior and adult circuits of the USLTA lasted until Dr. Johnson’s death in 1971.

“Dr. J” as players called him, was more than a coach. He was a teacher and role model. He was a talent scout par excellence who could spot and develop untapped potential.

He preached perseverance, patience, sportsmanship, etiquette, humility, and hard work. He valued education and garnered for his campers college scholarships through his network of associations established during his college football playing and coaching days. His lasting legacy is that he made tennis accessible for everyone by relocating it from private, segregated country clubs to integrated public facilities. (Continues next page)
NEW NFL HEAD COACH—In early 2017, Brother Vance Joseph was introduced as the Denver Broncos’ 16th head football coach. Brother Joseph was initiated through the Eighth District’s Lambda Delta Delta Chapter (Denver, CO).

TENNIS- Bro. Dr. Johnson

Tennis historians have lauded the noble efforts of Althea Gibson, and Arthur Ashe in breaking down racial barriers. Without the guidance of Dr. Johnson, however, Gibson, Ashe or countless others might not have succeeded so mightily. Dr. Johnson trained, coached, and mentored African Americans from his home in Lynchburg, Virginia for more than two decades.

On February 11, 2017, Kappa Chapter, the undergraduate chapter at Syracuse University, celebrated its 95th year on the New York campus. Brother Dr. Andrew Ray, the Fraternity’s 39th Grand Basileus was the chapter’s keynote speaker. At the gala event, Brother Justin Álvarez was named as the “Undergraduate Omega Man of the Year.” The recipient of the “Graduate Omega Man of the Year” Award was Brother Benjamin Jeffers. Brother Jeffers, the 28th Second District Representative was initiated through Kappa Chapter in 1971.

In November 2016, the chapter assembled together in the campus’ quad area for the ribbon cutting ceremony of the newly completed National Pan-Hellenic Council (NPHC) marble bench. The bench represents the impact Omega’s Kappa Chapter and NPHC organizations have played at Syracuse University. The NPHC was established in 1930 at Howard University. The NPHC is a group of historically African American Greek lettered fraternities and sororities. Presently, the National Pan-Hellenic is composed of nine organizations referred to as the “Divine Nine.”

Programs like the blood drive are part of the Fraternity’s Health Initiatives. The Health Initiatives program is one of ten of Omega Psi Phi’s international mandated programs.

Chapter Helps Community

On January 22, 2017, a devastating tornado hit the Southwest Georgia area and the city of Albany was severely affected. Several homes were destroyed and power was lost for several days.

The men of the Chi Epsilon Chapter at Albany State University helped storm victims by preparing plates of food. Over 500 meals were prepared at the Albany Civic Center.

Brother Bobby Andrew said, “The least that we can do is uplift the Albany community during their time of need.”

Chapter Provides College Funding

James Hillhouse High School senior Diamonique Russell wants to major in retail marketing in college.

Russell, 18, is attending the University of Connecticut in fall and has a jump start with some of the burden of college expenses. She won a $1,000 scholarship from the Epsilon Iota Iota chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc. as part of the chapter's scholarship initiative program.

“I was excited because I need all the money I can get; schools are really expensive,” said Russell, who said her family is full of Omega men. “It’s a blessing that Black organizations have stepped up to help our community and students,” she said. “They’re making sure we go to the next level in our education.”

Since 1990, the chapter has awarded more than $60,000 in scholarships. The chapter was chartered Nov. 16, 1990. It’s something the chapter’s scholarship chairman Brother David Canton said he’s proud of. “Higher education is necessary in today’s competitive environment,” said Canton, who has a doctorate in history from Temple University and teaches at Connecticut College.

“Unfortunately, these national scholarships are very hard to obtain, yet, local organizations give tons of money to students, which increases their chances for scholarship opportunities,” he said. Brother Canton believes awarding scholarships continues to expose the good work of the chapter.

“Students get a chance to be around professional African-American organizations, said Brother Canton. “Whether they join or not is not the real issue, the issue is seeing the black community … helping our students,” he said. Engineering and Science University Magnet School senior Nile James, who is attending Howard University in fall, said the Omega scholarship is another opportunity to help him reach his education goals.

“It’s perfect, because a lot of us need money to attend school and some of us have to change our first decision about going off to school due to the financial situation,” said Nile, who’s planning to join the fraternity while in college.

Nile said, “scholarships are available for students who really want to go college. Sometimes, we change course about going to college due to cost, but if they get these local scholarships, they know there is more out here.” More importantly, he said, “they already meet the criteria to get those scholarships.”

One problem, according to Nile, is students need to do more community service work with these organizations to learn about what other scholarships are out here for us. He said friends of his don’t apply for scholarships and are sometimes discouraged by the process. But, “if they knew these opportunities were out here, they could get that money and make other decisions — it gives people motivation when they win a scholarship,” said Nile James.

Each student must demonstrate a strong academic record, complete an essay, and be engaged in community service projects to be considered. Hamden High School senior Alana Cooper said she was extremely excited and thankful when she found out she was selected. It’s going to be a great help to pay for college, “said Cooper, 18, who’s attending St. John’s University and is majoring in business.

“It’s important that black organizations help African-American students attain higher education. It’s great when different sororities and fraternities in our community make this available to seniors.” Brother Ruel Dixon, who serves on the chapter’s scholarship committee, said, “the chapter is obligated to alleviate some of the financial stress for parents and students. While college can be expensive, Brother Dixon said, “going to school increases earning potential. It’s an investment you have to make — it’s a heavy burden financially, but how else are we going to measure up?”
Bro. Jefferson Reimagines Reconstruction

It’s traditional in black literature to rewrite history. And author Michael Jefferson did just that when he penned his book of historical fiction “Deo Vindice: The Resurrection.”

“There are trailblazers and contemporary writers that have done this,” said New Haven native Catina Bacote, a creative writing professor at Warren Wilson College in Asheville, North Carolina.

“What I respect about Michael Jefferson’s work is he’s using both history and the imagination in an effort to re-imagine the past. I believe the past impacts the present and what happens in the future,” said Bacote.

“This type of work is respected and most people seem to respond well to it; it has a place and lots of value,” added Bacote. “Deo Vindice: The Resurrection” is about one man’s obsession to right the wrongs of a horrible racial injustice by empowering its victims to take matters into their own hands, according to www.deovindicethebook.com.

The book takes the reader to 1868, when Benjamin “Bluff” Wade is president pro tempore of the United States Senate. After the impeachment and subsequent conviction of President Andrew Johnson, Wade assumes the presidency due to a never-before-used constitutional quirk.

Jefferson said the idea of the book came from a response to a question asked while he was taking a civil rights course in law school. “The professor at the time posed the question ‘If you were president at the time of reconstruction what would you do differently?’” said Omega’s Brother Jefferson, a New Haven criminal defense attorney.

“We had to write about this, and one of the things I talked about was arming blacks or the ex-slaves to to protect their interest, which I thought was incredibly important,” he said. Jefferson said the reason he treats Wade as a hero in the novel is because he empowers the ex-slaves to take matters into their own hands.

“This is not about white soldiers coming to the rescue of black people; this is about an armed struggle led by black people against a ferocious enemy determined to maintain the status quo,” he said.

According to the book, Wade is determined to implement his newly drafted Fifth Reconstruction Act. This Act authorizes widespread reform in the social, political and economic life of citizens in the former Confederacy. This sweeping act also approves the militarization of blacks living in those states, the website said.

For too long, Jefferson said, “others have been writing our story, both fictional and nonfictional; I wanted to provide a black perspective.”

The book also is an opportunity to challenge certain aspects of black culture, according to Bro. Jefferson.

“It was important for me to challenge the existing norms in our community,” Jefferson said. “I wanted to challenge the standards of beauty and homophobia in our community; these are the essential elements of the book.”

Attorney Robert Pellegrino said Jefferson’s book is an incredible melding of American history and race.

“As historical fiction, it is a fascinating account of what America could have become had blacks come into power after the Civil War,” said Pellegrino, 58, who recently published a book called “I See Color,” which documents his journey educating himself on the issue of race — from personal relationships and experiences.

Jefferson’s vast knowledge of both American history and race relations provides a provocative story that both teaches and engages the reader — and one comes away with a greater knowledge of American history and a deeper understanding of the role of race in that history.

Other characters in the book are Lisa Stewart, an exceptionally brilliant and strikingly beautiful change agent, and Aurelius Foginet, an unassuming military and political genius. With Stewart at his side, the powerful and determined black duo, along with a black political organizer, Randall McArthur, and the elite troops of the feared southern guard attempt to establish a safe haven for blacks in the former Confederacy, according to the book.

Connecticut State Conference National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) Youth and College Division adviser Karrol-Ann Brown said Jefferson, “has been very supportive of our NAACP unit and has been a role model for our young people.” Omega’s Jefferson noted that the book also serves as an alternate history and students can learn valuable lessons.

Tau Pi & Pi Omega Plays Softball Classic

Two Maryland Omega Psi Phi Graduate Chapters, Tau Pi and Pi Omega participated in their first Softball Classic in June 2017. The classic featured the pitching brilliance of Tau Pi’s Brother Calvin Zellars, a former 2nd District Representative. Bro. Zellars (on far left) was unable to quiet Pi Omega’s batting giants during their softball game held in Jessup, Maryland.
Chapter Sponsors Career Day

When it comes to working with young people, the Brothers of Gamma Pi Chapter enjoy sharing their knowledge and connecting young students with mentors and others who can help them chart a course to success. That philosophy is most evident in Gamma Pi’s Project ENRICH program that meets monthly at Bowie State University and was on display Saturday, January 21st, during a careers presentation.

In a different twist this year, Project ENRICH director Bro. Willie Hines arranged for students to hear from just two presenters for Career Day. The focus this year was on entrepreneurship. In featuring just two professionals, Project ENRICH was able to turn the spotlight on business ownership rather than type of occupation.

Brother Anthony Stewart connected quickly and directly with students when he “got real” and told them that his success today was a direct contrast to his rural farm upbringing on Maryland’s Eastern Shore. He talked openly about his status as the lowest-performing child academically among nine siblings in the household. “Everybody in my family has a graduate degree and they all graduated Magna Cum Laude and Summa Cum Laude and I graduated, ‘Thank you Lawdy. I barely got out of here” (Bowie State, 1985), he said to laughs from the full auditorium.

Brother Stewart, owner of Stewart Financial Services, Inc., shared his story about how he ambled around early in the years immediately after college not knowing what he really wanted to do with his life. A Business major, he initially was consumed with becoming a Xerox salesman. He pursued that dream as long as he could – coming “close, but no cigar.” He recalled how with a pregnant wife and living in a small condo, he struck out on his own knowing very little about how money works or the financial services industry, but with a strong curiosity and a willingness to learn. He found himself very interested in the topic and it led him to his own financial services business part-time part-time initially and then full-time.

To the Project ENRICH students, Brother Stewart’s story was an example of a creative way to put your college education to work even if your GPA is not very high. Brother Stewart’s main message: “Don’t ever chase money; chase your dreams.”

Xi Phi Chapter Promotes Omega Black College Tour

Since its inception in 1986, the Omega Black College Tour (BCT) has become arguably one of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity’s most successful and recognized programs. The Omega Black College Tour program identifies and prepares students of color for visitation and academic review of Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs). The program also introduces a multitude of students, eager to learn about higher education opportunities, to HBCU college admissions administrators.

The chapter’s comprehensive approach begins with an aggressive city-wide talent search from a pool of over 300 New York City high school students. Only 50 students are selected for the Omega College Tour Program. The selected students must complete a five-weekend workshop session which includes two parent workshops.

Their portfolios must meet the highest standards as they are viewed by some of Black America’s most prestigious institutions. Some the HBCUs schools on the college tour included: Clark Atlanta, Delaware State, Howard, Hampton, Spelman, Morehouse, North Carolina A&T, Morgan State, North Carolina Central, and the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore.

“To those who donate, you turn dreamers into achievers, and turn hopeless thoughts to hope,” said Naliah Wright, a freshman at Hampton University. Wright, a 2016 BCT alumna also added, “I would not be at Hampton without the men of Xi Phi Chapter and the Omega Black College Tour. I made the Dean’s List this year as a freshman, and I plan to do even better as a sophomore.”

One of Alpha Omega Chapter’s shining lights in the Washington, D.C. community is the Omega Academy program. The program is a model for how non-profit organizations can work with local public and private organizations in building bridges for African-American youth.

Dr. Ben Carson, the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) mentioned during his confirmation hearing that education, training and jobs are key factors in addressing poverty, and fair housing issues.

Omega Academy’s Director, Brother Major Galloway, a program analyst for the Office of Policy, Programs and Legislative Initiatives at HUD embraced some Dr. Carson’s ideas as solutions to problems in the community. “Our goal is to help the youth develop a personal roadmap to life after high school and to help them acquire life-skills to become ready to pursue careers through college, the military or vocational training,” said Brother Galloway.

He also added that, “the purpose of the Omega Academy, is to help participants develop a personal roadmap and action-plan toward their career goals.” Galloway created a curriculum for the academy that inspires and impact life skills for African American youth. In addition, his position at HUD provides him with a unique understanding of Black males as they transition from teenagers to adulthood. Galloway said that “we are fortunate to have professional members in the chapter that work in a variety of career fields.”

Brother Galloway commented that the academy’s workshop presenters have included a Federal Judge, a NASA engineer and a Deputy General Counsel member for the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

The Omega Academy program’s goal is to bring together African American males and their parents as they learn about science and politics through speaker presentations and tours. Galloway hopes to increase participation in the academy’s outreach program. “In light of the low graduation rate and performance gap, particularly for African-American male youth in the District, we recognize there is a tremendous need to provide academic enrichment, literacy, and life-skills services that support young adolescent men in need of direction,” also commented Brother Galloway.

Chapter’s Reading Program

Omega Psi Phi’s Psi Alpha Alpha Graduate Chapter placed an importance on reading to school age children.

The Psi Alpha Alpha Brothers called “The Sirs,” read to a half dozen third-grade classes at Riverside Elementary School in Alexandria, VA. One of the featured books read was “Joanie’s House Becomes a Home,” on April 6, 2017.

The book tells of the incredible story of a girl named, Joanie Chen who is moving from San Francisco to Boston with her family. The story presents Joanie’s ordeal of leaving San Francisco and adjusting to finding new friends in a different environment.

The book was selected as the eighth book from the school’s library. Psi Alpha Alpha Chapter was represented by 14 brothers who served as reading mentors. “The Sirs,” included: Brothers Marion “Barney” Barnwell, Bradford Caldwell, James Cherry, Richard Garner, James George, Jerome “Duke” Haggins, Willard Jasper, JD Leverett, Ronald Lofton, Sr., Frank Matthews, Richard Morris; Sheldon Schanck and Charles Sias. To date, Psi Alpha Alpha have donated over 988 books in connection with the reading program. The overarching goal of this social action effort was to inspire the third-graders to be excited about reading.

Sigma Mu Mu Serves Meals

LOUDOUN COUNTY, VA- On February 24, 2017, Sigma Mu Mu Chapter provided breakfast for the residents of the Loudoun Homeless Emergency Shelter in Leesburg, VA. The chapter’s “Breakfast by the Bruhs”, is a regular meal service, and a social action initiative led by Brother Drew Gerald.

“The Brothers cooked, served and catered to all the needs of the residents. On the menu was an old-fashioned breakfast of scrambled eggs, grits, french toast, bacon, sausage, fresh fruit, and orange juice. This breakfast is quite popular and was well received at the homeless shelter. It allows residents to partake in a hearty meal, while giving Brothers an opportunity to interact directly with the residents and hear their stories,” said Bro. Gerald.

Gerald also added that the chapter’s involvement, outreach and assistance is beneficial to the community. The chapter’s partnership with the Volunteers of America help provide basic needs to the residents at the Loudoun Homeless Emergency Shelter. Epsilon Phi Chapter’s Manhood Project was born out of a conversation about the Black Lives Matter movement during the civil unrest in summer 2016.

During that summer, Brother Irwin Todd and Quincy Snider discussed methods to get their chapter involved with Memphis’ young Black males. Riverview Middle School was selected as the site of the chapter’s project.

Epsilon Phi Omega men invested their time in speaking to young men on how to engage with law enforcement; rejecting gang activity, and understanding the importance of community involvement. The Manhood Project name symbolized how chapter brothers wanted to address young Black males in the community--man to man. Other topics that were discussed during the sessions included: personal hygiene, respect for women, careers, and self-esteem.

Chapter members that are members of the Memphis City Council and the Memphis Police Department provide an added insight to city government.

The chapter also spent extensive hours mentoring school age children at the Riverview School.
Xi Xi Chapter Protests Kentucky Legislation

On February 27, 2017, Brothers from Xi Xi Chapter supported a Charter School Rally in Elizabethtown, KY.

The purpose of the event was to protest and discuss pending legislation (HB 520) in the Kentucky House that would have introduced charter schools in the state.

Organizers and community allies joined together to educate the community on how charter schools would take resources away from already underfunded public schools. Some of the issues included the potential for segregation of schools and the board being able to appoint officials rather than locally elected representation.

The Brothers of Phi Kappa Kappa Graduate Chapter held their Black History Program in February 2017. The program celebrated the legacy of Brother Dr. Carter G. Woodson. Dr. Woodson is considered as the “Father of Black History.” Bro. Woodson was elected to honorary membership into Omega Psi Phi on February 10, 1917—hundred years ago. The event featured traditional chants from Africa and a tribute to Hip Hop music. Also, performing at the Atlanta event was Brother Harrison Thacker, a local rapper, followed by Jazz Standard, a high school musical group.

The keynote speaker for the event was Brother Phillip Neeley. Omega’s Bro. Neeley emotionally spoke about his challenges during childhood. Neeley, a law enforcement officer mentioned that he grew up with his father sitting in a prison cell as he was raised by his mother and grandmother. “I was always told that I would end up just like my father as a kid. I will never be nothing was something I always heard,” said Neeley.

Bro. Neeley said that there was a big fight, and he and his friends ran away from the scene before the police arrived. What Neeley didn’t realize, his running away placed him in a life changing moment. The track coach from Clark College saw Neely running and later asked him to join the track team. Neeley would go on to become a track All-American at Clark College. He was the first in his family to graduate from college, became a Chief of Police, and the rest is history—Black History.

Academy Honors An Omega Man

COLUMBUS, GA-The Liberty Theatre and Cultural Center named a new academy after its longtime theatre champion, Brother Robert Lamar Anderson. Anderson is the chair emeritus of the Liberty Theatre Board of directors.

The Robert Lamar Anderson Academy of Excellence: Arts Immersion Program will serve about 60 Black and Hispanic at-risk-males entering eighth grade beginning this summer. The program will be art-based including: academic support, arts training, counseling and leadership training.

Bro. Anderson is a graduate of Fort Valley State University and received a Master’s in education from Georgia State University. After 36 years, he retired from CB&T as the Senior Vice President of Governmental Affairs. Omega’s Anderson was initiated through Upsilon Sigma Chapter in 1962. He is currently a member of Lambda Iota Graduate Chapter.

At the beginning of 2017, the Xi Pi Graduate Chapter supported three major activities in the Colorado Springs, Colorado community.

In January, the chapter was part of the registration team for the Educating Children of Color Summit (ECOC). Also, a few Brothers were conference presenters.

Delta Gamma Gamma Holds Blood Drive

On February 18, 2017, Delta Gamma Gamma chapter collaborated with the University of Nebraska – Lincoln and the Red Cross. The chapter honored Brother Dr. Charles R. Drew by hosting a blood drive on the campus.

This was Delta Gamma Gamma's second blood drive in four months with community involvement. The community involvement demonstrates the chapter's steady growth and nurturing of relationships with local partners. Delta Gamma Gamma's first Blood Drive was held in November 2016, at Mt. Zion Baptist Church located in Lincoln, Nebraska.

The goal was to educate students and the general public about Brother Dr. Drew's significant impact on the health-care profession.

As a result of the partnership with the university, the chapter raised the goal to get forty donors for the second blood drive. However, the brothers were pleased that sixty people donated blood.

Many of the blood donors were on-campus residents of the University. Consequently, the blood drive highlighted Omega Psi Phi's commitment to universal health, and Delta Gamma Gamma's obligation to educate and uplift the community.
Counselor Pushes for Anti-Hazing Law

The Honorable Brother Tommie Jewell Jr., Eighth District Counselor is playing a critical role in an ongoing effort to pass an anti-hazing law in New Mexico.

The proposed measure would make it a crime for any person who is a student at a public or private college within the state to intentionally or recklessly endanger the mental or physical health of another.

This law would include current or prospective students during activities related to the initiation, induction or maintenance of membership in any student organization, club or team.

The law would apply regardless of whether the organization in question is sanctioned or authorized by an educational institution.

This legislation is sponsored by New Mexico State Representative Sheryl Williams-Stapleton, the first African American Majority Floor Leader in the New Mexico Legislature, and a member of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Incorporated.

Representative Williams-Stapleton, a Democrat, was spurred to sponsor this legislation by members of the Albuquerque Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc.

“This type of legislation is overdue,” the representative said, noting that she was drawn to this cause not only because she is a member of a Greek letter organization, but also because she is the mother of a son who played high school football.

“If you look across the state of New Mexico, in at least 80% of our sports clubs some sort of hazing takes place,” she said.

“In addition, at both the University of New Mexico and New Mexico State University students have died as a result of hazing. The state needs to have some sort of deterrent, so that students know there are consequences to endangering the health and safety of others.”

Brother Jewell noted that New Mexico is one of only six states in the nation that does not have an anti-hazing law on the books. Bro. Jewell, a Nu Rho Chapter member also said, “students must know that this type of activity is not okay, and they should not be subjected to this behavior when joining a club or organization.”

Representative Williams-Stapleton credits Brother Jewell, who is a retired judge, for helping her respond to objections from fellow legislators as the bill was debated on the house floor.

“He was there on the third day that I presented the bill on the floor,” she said, “and just his presence was a major help. The distinguished judge was recognized on the floor, with many house members commenting on how fair and honest he has always been.”

Beyond that, she said, “his legal mind gave me an extreme advantage in terms of responding to questions that other legislators posed on the floor.” She recalled a specific instance in which Judge Jewell explained to her how a proposed amendment would have severely narrowed the scope and intent of the bill. Using that argument, she was successful in defeating the effort to add that amendment.

With Judge Jewell’s help, the bill was approved by the New Mexico House of Representatives in a 60 to 7 vote. Unfortunately, the bill was stalled in the Senate’s Judiciary Committee, preventing it from becoming law. However, the bill’s supporters have vowed to reintroduce it during the next legislative session, which begins in January 2018.
African-American men used to approach decisions about their future.

Since 2009, Bro. Solomon-Simmons has filled a void in today’s African American youth. Through his organization, the MVP Foundation, Solomon-Simmons’ high profile NLF clients provide an elite football training camp for hundreds of boys from north Tulsa.

In 2013, the MVP Foundation hosted its first Manhood Summit as part a weekend of events for eighth-grade boys from single parent households. Over time, the foundation began partnering with schools that serve its target demographic. Schools identify students who would benefit from the Manhood Summit, coordinate permission slips and provide transportation.

The MVP Foundation has provided intense manhood training to over 400 boys. The foundation currently has a database of approximately 115 mentors ranging from ages 16 to 70. Also, more than 200 men have received mentoring opportunities. Brother Solomon-Simmons is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and a member of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity’s Xi Omega Chapter.

Brother Art Norman, a reporter at NBC-TV Chicago served as the anniversary’s Master of Ceremony. Bro. Norman was also a recipient of Rho Gamma Gamma’s Lifetime Achievement Award. The event was held at Chicago’s St. Ignatius College Prep High School.
The Emerging Leaders Institute (ELI) program was created to identify, foster and produce leadership within the 12th District. This initiative also will provide ELI Fellows the opportunity to enhance their skills through a leadership-based curriculum.

The ELI program would create a deeper resource of effective leaders among Omega men and in the communities they serve. With previous leaders within the District, many former District Representatives, District Committee Chairs, and Chapter Officers provide instruction to the ELI Fellows.

The leadership mentors collaborate and expose ELI Fellows to the importance of Omega Psi Phi’s mission. The program was established in 2014. The first ELI Fellows included Brothers Geary Bleasoe, Saeed Gallawoy, Raphael Irving, Omar Staples and Ed Young. The inaugural class also provided the District with a leadership template. Each Omega man in the first group learned through leadership webinars and books. Currently, Brother Ed Young and Brother Geary Bleasoe serve as ELI faculty members.

The second class included Brothers S.W. Bowen, Paul Hodson, Jason Jones, Eien Williams, and Walter Torrence III. The updated curriculum contains materials which will provide new and seasoned members about information on scheduling, code of conduct, mandated programs, and fraternal policies. The ELI instructors and fellows will compile a detail reference handbook.

The handbook will be approved after the 12th District Executive Board’s recommendations.

Q&A with Brothers S.W. Bowen and Ed Young – both past ELI Fellows and current Institute Leaders.

Q: What advice would you give to Brothers interested in becoming ELI Fellows in the future?
A: Brother Bowen – “I would encourage everyone to explore ways to make yourself better by going outside of your comfort zone to challenge yourself and accomplish something different. You will find yourself rising to the occasion and exceeding your goals.”

Q: What has been your most significant takeaway and lesson learned from your ELI experience?
A: Brother Young – “Realization that most important decisions made at the District level are not by chance.”

Q: How does ELI fit into your overall experience as an Omega Man?
A1: Brother Bowen – “ELI has provided me an opportunity to network and leave a mark.

A2: Brother Young – “This experience has allowed me to deconstruct personal ideologies and develop a broader more wide-ranging fraternal view leading to an organic development of succession planning and growth.”

Q: Any final thoughts?
A: Brother Bowen – “I would like to thank the leadership for creating ELI. It has provided me with the insight needed as I take on leadership roles with the Fraternity and my professional career.

A think tank of capable leaders building programs for current and future leaders will cultivate strong candidates for leadership roles.

I also enjoyed the camaraderie it built allowing our different backgrounds, ages, and experiences to come together and create a lasting mark to commemorate such a program as grand as ELI.
Clark Stars in Reality Show

Brother Robert Clark of Rho Iota Iota Chapter is starring in a new reality TV program.

The show called “Hunted” will be airing on the CBS Network. Hunted is a show in which teams of fugitives must evade law enforcement for 28 days. Each team that dodges the law wins $250,000 in prize money. The fugitives are reality show cast members and not real criminals. The law is a team of retired law enforcement officials and consultants with a variety of skill sets such as counterintelligence, cyber-crime, fugitive apprehension and others.

Brother Clark is a law enforcement commander in charge of the team. He directs his team from an operations center in an undisclosed location in Georgia. The fugitives are on the run in southeast United States in an area which includes South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. Brother Clark’s team utilizes a variety of methods to track and capture the fugitives before that 28 days expires. Although the fugitives are not real criminals, Clark said “Once the action starts we track the fugitives. Our team takes the job very seriously as we are professionals with a mission to accomplish and our professional pride is at stake.”

According to Bro. Clark, Hunted has been very successful as viewer ratings far exceeded the expectations of CBS executives. After nearly a decade with local law enforcement agencies in the Youngstown, Ohio area, Clark joined the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and recently retired as Assistant Special Agent In Charge (ASAC) of the FBI’s Los Angeles Field Office. Clark retired after 21 years of service.

Brother Clark is supremely qualified for his newly minted role as a reality TV star. When the idea of Hunted was initially floated, Clark did not take it seriously at all. Before production, the pace quickened and he endured a series of interviews and meetings.

Clark mentioned that when he had a meeting with the President of CBS, he knew there was a real possibility of landing a role on the TV show. Soon after that important meeting, he was cast as the Commander of the team.

Brother Clark is a member of Rho Iota Iota Chapter. The chapter is located in Long Beach, CA. Omega’s Clark serves as the chapter’s Chaplain and on several chapter committees.

WHEN WE WEAR THE GLOVES

“When we wear the gloves, A brother has gone from our midst and sailed to golden shores.

When we wear the gloves, A friend has passed the final test and walks through purple doors.

The circle has an empty place, A voice will raise no more. The song of fellowship and love Uplift forevermore. When we wear the gloves, A light goes from this earthly life. The visor closed again.

Yet all the heavens open wide, To let a new star in.

When we wear the gloves, A brother leaves the chapter rolls, and moves to other worlds.

For when we say our last goodbye, He walks on streets of Pearl, When we wear the gloves.

Knowing Where to Turn as a Caregiver

Caregiving is the highest expression of love and commitment. At the same time, it can present difficult challenges to the well-being and financial security of the caregiver.

There are about five million African-American family caregivers in the US. They perform tasks that include shopping, providing transportation to appointments, handling finances, and helping with bathing, dressing, and getting out of bed. They also carry out such complex tasks such as managing medication, preparing special diets, and providing extensive care for wounds.

A new study by AARP shows that the average family caregiver spends about $7,000 a year on out-of-pocket costs related to caregiving. About nine out of 10 people want to age in place, at home. About 85 percent of family caregivers are caring for someone who lives at home or shares a home with them. There are a number of modifications that can make the home safe and comfortable for a loved one with limited mobility, such as wide hallways and doors, controls, switches, and countertops that can be reached from a wheelchair, lever handles, and a raised toilet and grab bars in the bathroom.

• Start a conversation about possible future needs without waiting for a crisis to occur.
• Put together a team so you don’t have to meet all the responsibilities of caregiving alone.
• Make a plan to meet those responsibilities, a plan that can get everyone on the team on the same page.
• Reach out to professionals and organizations for support. In this regard, Amy Goyer, AARP’s caregiving expert, offers these tips: Examine home-based services, such as physical, occupational, speech and music therapy, as well as mobile doctors and lab tests, home health aides, and meal delivery. To find these services, you can contact your local area agency on aging at http://www.n4a.org/ or another community-based organization or Veterans Affairs. If you are hiring a paid caregiver, make sure you conduct background checks and get references for them. It is also a good idea to check on their work, including through unannounced visits.
• Take care of yourself. It is easy to overlook your own needs when you’re caring for a loved one and pulled in so many different directions, but maintaining your own health and well-being is a critical part of caregiving. Don’t forget your own needs for exercise, sleep, and healthy eating. Take steps to reduce stress and enjoy life. Consider using social networks such as www.facebook.com and www.caringbridge.com for support. You have to take care of yourself in order to provide patient and loving care to your loved ones. According to Brother Dr. Robert L. Gill's book entitled “The Omega Psi Phi Fraternity and the Men Who Made Its History,” the 40th Grand National Conclave was held in the City of Atlanta in 1954. One of the guests at the 40th Conclave held between December 27th thru December 30th was Brother Dr. Benjamin Mays.

The Oracle research team discovered that the featured photograph of Omega men at the 1954 Grand Conclave was incorrectly labeled as the 41st Conclave.

This picture was also taken a few weeks after Brother Moses C. Norman was initiated into Omega through Beta Psi Chapter at Atlanta’s Clark College on December 13, 1954.
